To: Navistar Suppliers

As we work together to create a competitive advantage for Navistar and deliver value to our customers, I'd like to inform you of an important development at Navistar.

We announced today that we intend to close our Garland, Texas, truck manufacturing operation as part of our efforts to reduce costs and optimize our manufacturing footprint. Our Springfield and Escobedo facilities already build the vast majority of trucks that are produced at Garland, so we will raise schedules as needed at those plants to absorb Garland production volumes. Navistar intends to cease operations at Garland by the first half of 2013.

We have developed a supply chain transition plan to support the new footprint and do not expect this change to result in any significant disruption to the supply base. Those of you who currently ship materials to Garland can expect to hear from us about the transition plan.

Thank you for your ongoing partnership, support and collaboration.
